

Ranga Yogeshwar

Ranga Yogeshwar, science journalist, physicist and television moderator, was born in Luxembourg as the son of an Indian engineer and a Luxembourg artist. He spent his early childhood mainly in India. Ranga Yogeshwar studied physics („Experimental Elementary Particle Physics and Astrophysics“) at RWTH Aachen University and worked at the Swiss Institute for Nuclear Research (SIN), CERN in Geneva and Forschungszentrum Jülich. In 1987, the physicist joined the West German Radio Cologne as an editor and headed the Science Program Group for several years. Since 2008 he has been working as an independent journalist and author. Yogeshwar has developed, produced and presented numerous TV shows and is one of the most well-known science journalists in Germany. His books are bestsellers and have been translated into several languages. Yogeshwar has received more than 60 professional awards and has received many honorary doctorates from the University of Wuppertal, the Federal Cross of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Order of Merit of the State of North Rhine-Westphalia and the Ordre de Mérite du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg.
